

Letter from the Publisher

Hail, hail and farewell

This month we welcome a new editor, add a new feature and say goodbye to an old friend in the pages of CEP.

First, we are pleased to welcome Kristine Chin as editor-in-chief of CEP. Kristine holds BS and MS degrees in chemical engineering from Cooper Union and was a practicing chemical engineer before turning to journalism. She was an associate editor at Chemical Engineering Magazine and was most recently editor-in-chief at ePlant Magazine. Kristine brings practical experience in chemical engineering and journalism as well as enthusiasm and insight to her responsibilities at CEP.

Next, in an effort to provide members with an expanded format for news and information about AIChE activities and people, this month we incorporate AIChExtra into CEP. This re-formatted, full-color version of our member newsletter will appear regularly in CEP and provide even more information about the people and events that are AIChE. By utilizing delivery technology available at our printer, AIChExtra will be included only in issues of CEP that go to members of AIChE.

Finally, we say farewell to the traditional reader service card in favor of the printed version that appears on page 95 of this month's issue. Because your comments and other research tell us that you prefer the internet and other vehicles to get information about products and services you see in CEP, we think this is a better service to you, our readers.

Please welcome Kristine Chin (krisc@aiche.org) and let us know what you think about AIChExtra being included in CEP.

David H. Colby, CBC
Publisher
davec@aiche.org